After a mountain bike accident in 1998, Danny Sloan made the leap from factory work to social work after getting his degree in 2008. His journey has taken him through many challenges; it has been a slow, but increasingly consistent climb upwards. In 2012, Danny and his wife got married in Turkey, and have settled in Surrey. This has been the busiest period of his life with a slew of volunteering, work, and recreational activities.

Danny is a Chapter Coordinator for the Tetra Society of North America and a professional musician who plays guitar, writes songs, and sings with various other artists in the Vancouver area. In the past he has volunteered with the Vancouver Adapted Music Society (VAMS), SCI-BC and has worked as an employment counselor and job developer. Danny has also owned his own website design business and continues to develop his music career. His future plans are to release his first album, do some mini-tours around BC, and to continue growing on a number of levels.
